PCS MAKES DEBUT ENTRY INTO HAWAII

CATHOLIC PASTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS SEE PCS COMPUTING POWER

OmniData Corporation's Parish Computer System (PCS) made its debut in Hawaii on Sept. 21, in a presentation at the Ala Moana Hotel.

PCS is a new parish management program that can help launch the Diocese of Honolulu into the 21st century.

The oohs and aahs of the audience echoed their excitement at the introduction of PCS to Hawaii. Pastors, parish secretaries and accountants from across the state attended the presentation given by Larry McGovern, president of OmniData Corporation, and organized by Cosmo Enterprise, Inc., a local, Catholic-owned technology business. PCS helps parishes to easily keep track of finances & accounting, census data, scheduling and other important aspects of parish management. PCS can synchronize parish school data with general parish data. It also launches a parish into the age of the Internet with simple-to-use website features. The system can be modified according to the unique needs of each parish.

McGovern and his team of programmers used the feedback of parish administrators to build the system which would serve the needs of parishes today and into the future. More than ever, parishes have to deal with the increasing demands of information management, and have to reach out to the community via the Internet, all of which PCS does. Many parishes are now using PDS, an older system that does not have many of the capabilities of PCS.

PCS is being used successfully in the Los Angeles Archdiocese and 20 in the San Diego Archdiocese.

There is a considerable amount of computer talent in the Catholic community, creating many opportunities for people to help one another.

Over the years, Cosmo Enterprise, Inc. has embraced and worked with many Christian churches and IT volunteers. During talks with parish administrators, the idea of forming a support group for computer software and hardware was conceived. This group will serve as a venue for the exchange of ideas.
